Seaboard Air Line Behind the Scheme.

There has been a good deal of confusurveys and general development in

The South and Western railroad, following practically the old Charleston, at the hospitable home of an old friend, and we were up bright and early next Johnson City, Tenn., to St. Paul on morning, ready for a day's tramp. The the Norfolk and Western, is the Geo. L. Carter enterprise, behind which has been the Seahoard Air Line.

Immediately following this chapter and survey there appeared a rival charter and survey known as the South and Eastern, headed by Mr. McHarg, the "millionaire head" of the Toms Creek

The object of the latter was to knock Mr. Carter out of his right of way and charter and build the road to the sea coast, just as Mr. Carter proposed to do. Mr. Carter and his South and Western, after a hard fought battle in the courts, won. He had more money and a longer head than his rivals guessed. The fact that Mr. Carter was the organizer of the Toms Creek Coal and Coke Co. several years ago contributed

For some time Mr. Carter has had no connection whatever with the Toms Creek property. It was upon this rock that he and McHarg split some years ago and parted company. Since that time, instead of being "buddies," as formerly, they have been antagonistic, This will probably explain very clearly the South and Western and the South

Then there was already in existence and operation the Virginia and Southwestern railroad, a short line extending very closely with the "similarity" of Matters, however, have become decidedly simplified since the South and Eastern scheme has dropped out and its voice is no longer heard in the land.

The Southern system seems to have swallowed the whole business with the exception of the Carter South and Western, or Seaboard Air Line.

The Virginia and Southwestern has within the last year become distinctly Southern in all its appointments and equipments. All the way from Appalachia to Bristol Southern agents and operators are in evidence. as far east as Norton. The Black Mountain line and Interstate are but feeders, which accounts for the "turn-off" two miles north of Pennington Gap, on the line headed direct for Black Mountain, and which makes a sort of semi-circle, landing at Appalachia. This line is about twenty miles long. The branch from Pennington Gap to Black Mountain is about ten miles long.

These branch lines will bring coal to Appalachia from Black Mountain and the Crab Orchard sections, where it will be taken up by the Virginia and due south to Rogersville over the new line of the Southern, connecting with the Southern main line a few miles east of Morristown.

Summing up, the situation is about this: The Southern will cover the coal territory west of Norton and the Carter -Seaboard-line will get the coal east of Norton.
